

Matt:

I have reconsidered the order you will present your announcement and launch of the canyonrim.org website.

You will go first, right after the pledge of allegiance.

The simple reason is to allow our members and guests the capability to access the website during the meeting for the literature you have so diligently posted to the site.

I did a simple accounting of the number of pages of literature you have posted, along with how many copies we would normally distribute to the council and guests and it was astounding.

798 individual sheets of paper if we did them all. That's a ream and a half of paper we can save just this meeting.

Extrapolated over the course of the year and we are talking a substantial reduction of paperwork.

And that's not counting the other stuff we could have added along with links to organizations, elected officials and such.

Already the cost/benefit is enormous and I can't thank you enough for your skills and expertise.

If you add those savings of paper, along with the small cost of the website: $12.00 for the domain name, free hosting from Nate's server, the donation of your time to build and launch, it's a pretty substantial benefit to our community.

Please feel free to use these figures in your presentation.

CRCA is very lucky to have you on the board.

Thank you and see you Wednesday.
